Q: Where to start with HTTPS/SSL on a cloud app? I created a simple web app for Google App Engine where the user can log into the site, create some content and see that content (no account login). I used the Python devserver to test it out. I want to do this via HTTPS, not the HTTP version. So I setup my self signed certificate on my local host and also made the URL pointing at that certificate. So far I have only made HTTP working. I'm wondering what the next step would be to do this. I believe I need a cert for my domain which I have right now, a cert for my app, and a cert for the server on GAE. Do I need to make another cert for my domain on the server on GAE or does GAE already know what I need in it's servers? I know that I need to add the right headers and make other changes. But to make this secure? A: Google doesn't automatically give you HTTPS for your application. The correct thing would be to create and add a certificate for your app. (You'll probably want to use LetsEncrypt, which is easy and automated.) This will get you onto the secure HTTPS portion of appspot.com. GAE doesn't care whether or not your application is HTTPS; it does care about ports, though. Your port of choice would be 80. If you need to use SSL for your app, you'll need to get your own certificate for your domain. Again, use LetsEncrypt for this. Then, simply set your Application's Credentials to the certificate you just created and restart your devserver and you should be good to go. Finally, when you're ready to deploy to AppEngine, set your Google
