Nebula Within is an absurdist, 2D, 80s-themed, rogue-lite, survival horror game. You play as one of four nebulae that have been released from their stasis to find that the world has not been kind to them. The game features a set of procedurally generated levels, multiple endings and quick-start, skip-the-annoying-levels difficulty levels. The main goal is to hack your way to the end of each level by avoiding alien infestation, traps, and other hazards. Key Features: 4 playable nebulae: 4 unique, challenging, puzzles and rooms to solve. 4 distinct weapon types: Beams, bullets, and traps. Quality of Life features like: new item and weapon powerups, frequent save system, and quality checkpoints. Backtracking and Offending Achievements: When you complete one room, you can keep exploring after the preceding room. When you manage to offend with 10% of your total inventory, you are awarded the achievement. Detailed Story Background: Learn the story behind the game and the main characters. Short Highlight: Use the stars above and the nebula below to help guide you. Astro Bot: Keep a watchful eye on Astr0bot, an ally that can help you stay on course. Warning: This game contains old arcade games that still work, and even though they are contained in water, don't drink it! Gameplay: The game begins as a straight forward survival game with enemies that can be avoided. Luckily for you, though, avoiding will require a lot of skill. This skill requirement is where the meat of the game starts to play out. The skill tree you build can impact how much damage you can withstand before you burst into steam, and how much damage you can endure before your shields begin to shatter and your life bar to decrease rapidly. The goal is to find the perfect balance between making enemies rupture and balancing your shields. The game introduces the concept of skills that enhance and increase the power of your abilities. This adds a dimension of strategy to the gameplay. You can aim to quickly build up your shields while rupturing enemies, or you can sacrifice defenses for rapid hits. It is up to you and your decisions on how you want to manage your health and skills to determine your survival. Stages and items: At the beginning of each room, you will find a belt and a lens. They are used to collect items and materials that you can

What's new:

: Red Sonja Republic's next feature film aimed at the silver screen starring Brigid and Robert Dougherty had a running time of 110 minutes, but due to the superhero genre, and the addition of the Rocketeer (or Falcon), was re-edited to 104- and 106-minute lengths. This was during the time when two-part TV shows were the only way of delivering such a length of programming, and as a result of this, 70-odd minutes of film were cut from the final product. When the final feature film by the Republic Studios the early 1950's was screened it was found that the material dropped from the broadcast version was most likely cut due to a varying aspect ratio, a 2.00:1 ratio seen both on television broadcasts and on theatrical prints of the film. Fortunately, the original version of this fantastical beast, as Republic co-founders Henry Levin and Arthur Bliss referred to it was exhibited with 'some of the final cut'. Seconds in the Commodity Market for the "Queen of the World" Red Sonja has been undergoing a somewhat torturous journey back into the booty of our racks since the past, with some recently being treated kindly and remastered, as well as receiving an audio-visual effect upgrade. Over the years the material quality issues presented by the 90's relased titles from the gallery have been addressed but not the files themselves, as they (mostly) remain un-remastered and suffer from Digital Degradation. Red Sonja has always been shown in 1.33:1 for reasons which are not spelled out in the modern world; most films were originally shot on film and were transferred to video before being presented on television. The Technicolor perfection which was displayed from the first time the film was released in 1951, until roughly the mid 1960's, when the process changed to the red, green and blue images during that time period. The change in the colour spectrum meant that the exception to the 1.33:1 metric became known as the aspect ratio for these reel-to-reel presentations. Although a huge amount of budget was wasted due to the launch of a number of different consumer television broadcast standards, mainly taking account of the inability to re-use the quality of existing film stocks, in the early 1950's the studios still believed that Technicolor was the best way of remastering the films and
