Let your servant David rejoice before you in the presence of your holy ones; let the glory of your majesty be over me. Your servant wishes to celebrate again the great and awesome deeds you have done for me, in delivering me from the hand of Saul; from a fierce man who hated me you made into a husband for me to wife. For I know that your love is good, and that you sent me to look after your servant David." Psalm 73:21-23 In the Holy Land, Jews, Christians, and Muslims often recite the prayer written above as a prayer for the dying. It serves as an example for the living to model the behavior of the dying toward the living, especially in the face of hardship or persecution. Jews believe that the regular recitation of these verses will strengthen the dying, and that during the dying process the soul will be remembered in the synagogue. The late Father Tim O'Shaughnessy, whose father was a rabbi, often recited this Prayer to the dying to inspire them and encourage them through the dying process. "One's father, mother, wife or child may be dying, and we pray for them, but God's relationship to us is something totally different from that. Our father is our God, and the way we have to live is to be always trying to live that relationship. That is what we pray, first of all, for our father, then for our brother and sister. That is our relationship with God. And we have to spend time remembering it, we have to be walking in it. It's the only way we can possibly believe in it."The present invention relates to a process for producing layered magnetic metal oxide particles with a short

"Recent events in France and other countries remind us that the threat of terrorism and the response to it are among the most difficult challenges facing world and all of us need to do more to keep our people safe," UN Secretary-General António Guterres said on Friday. "The Anti-Terrorism Bill, a key pillar of the global fight against terrorism, was just put to Parliament. I urge all States to step up their efforts to implement it in a manner that will protect everyone's rights." He also offered his sincerest condolences to the families of the victims of Wednesday's attacks in Barcelona and Cambrils, and of the French police officers who died on Thursday. The death toll in the Catalonian region had increased to 15. The driver of the van was killed by Spanish security forces before he could detonate his explosives, while the three alleged terrorists were shot dead by police. The UN chief also condemned the attack that killed five soldiers on Thursday. Expressing his "outrage" at the brutal killings, Mr. Guterres said such violence is "an affront to humanity and it is deeply disturbing that it is resulting in further human suffering." That violence must be identified, confronted and condemned without fail, he said, adding, "We must unite together against all forms of terrorism." He said the UN and other relevant stakeholders are ready to assist the authorities in their investigations and in support of the victims. At least 22 people died on Wednesday when a van ploughed into a crowded footway near Las Ramblas in Barcelona, as well as a person shot dead in the municipality of Alcanar. In the late hours of Thursday, a Spanish police officer died after being injured in Cambrils, and a further police officer was killed in the region of Almeria. On Friday, authorities urged the public to remain alert and report suspicious activity.Choroidal involvement in ophthal e79caf774b
