This study compares the relative value of screening for postpartum hemorrhage by using a new device (Minera; Lieber, Inc) with conventional methods. The Minera device screens for blood in the pad of the examination drape and immediately attracts the attention of the nurse. The cost of a new device was used to evaluate the financial consequences of screening in a low-risk obstetric practice. Using a decision analysis model, the authors show that screening with the Minera device alone is not cost-effective if 3.3% of women will have postpartum hemorrhage. When a 10-minute observation period is added to the screening procedure, screening is cost-effective for a 10.5% rate of postpartum hemorrhage. If the observation period is decreased from 10 to 5 minutes, screening is not cost-effective for rates of postpartum hemorrhage of less than 5.0%. The results of this analysis show that an inpatient practice that screens for postpartum hemorrhage by using a new device that is 100% effective may pay for itself by a reduction in rates of postpartum hemorrhage.Q: Get specific data from list of list of data I am trying to get specific data from a list of list of data. Boeing and the Indian government have reached an agreement in principle to sell F/A-18s and P-8Is worth about $2.2 billion over seven years, Indian defense ministry officials said. "We will sign the deal in the coming days," one of the officials told Reuters on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the negotiations. The deal would mark the start of a fast-tracking, informal process between New Delhi and the aircraft manufacturer for the sale of the jets that could lead to an eventual purchase of 126 aircraft from Boeing for the Indian Air Force and 48 for the Navy. Boeing's largest customer is the United States, where it makes almost every variant of the basic F-18 fighter sold to other countries. In the Indian deal, Boeing will receive a 10 percent offset, or roughly US$230 million, to create about 40,000 jobs in the United States, as the manufacturer seeks to compete with local firms for defense contracts, including from Russia. Boeing is the first U.S. exporter to win a fresh order for combat aircraft from India, which has been seeking to shake up its military industry. It said in December that it wanted to overhaul its Hindustan Aeronautics (HAL) factory in Nagpur, the leading Indian military aircraft exporter, to speed up production of the C17 and C130 transport aircraft. The agreement has no projected date for the contract to be signed but was expected to be sealed this month. It will be the largest-

United Nations Security Council Resolution 1920 United Nations Security Council Resolution 1920, adopted unanimously on February 22, 2009, after recalling resolutions 1546 (2004), 1654 (2005), 1706 (2006), 1737 (2006), 1803 (2008) and 1907 (2009), the Council renewed the mandate of the United Nations Mission in Sudan (UNMIS) until July 31, 2009.

Resolution Observations The Security Council recognised the importance of UNMIS to the region and its expansion, for Sudan's stability, and for the protection of civilians. It reiterated that a political settlement of the situation in Darfur was essential, including the need to act jointly. It also expressed its concern over the deteriorating security situation in that region, which it said was directly linked to the deteriorating security situation in the Darfur region. It was further concerned by the increased attacks against civilians and United Nations and humanitarian personnel. Acts The Security Council reaffirmed the previous resolutions by emphasising that those responsible for serious violations of human rights and international humanitarian law would be held accountable. It welcomed efforts by the Government of Sudan
