Get the latest stock data from Yahoo via PSQ function and display it in a simple and easy way. Features: -Retrieve the latest market data from each company stock related to provided symbols. -Easy to use with... A single value formula that performs two calculations: "add the previous value of the cell to the current value" and "then subtract the current value from the previous value". Excel comes with a built-in function to do this, VLOOKUP(value, table, [row][, col], [is A-H]), but this function requires that the lookup value be located on the same column and row as the current cell. You can't go one row down in a regular column and one... I have written a software in VB6, where you can calculate the average, maximum, minimum and standard deviation of a given set of data. You can enter the minimum and maximum numbers for the variables you want to calculate, they will be automatically calculated. You can also enter a range or single value if you want to calculate the average, maximum, minimum, standard deviation of only one number, or any combination of the... This vbscript is used as a.reg file, with a command to be executed from the commandline. The script adds all the 5 Excel Applications folder paths to 'HKEY_CLASSES_ROOT\Applications\excel.exe' The script does not work if Excel is installed by Windows Installer 0.2 released I've updated the script to support Excel 2016 and Office 2013. It works for Classic Mac and Windows 7 machines. I've added a menu option: Open.xlsx files with Excel 2016 or Microsoft Excel 2013 installed; to highlight the most wanted and best use of the script; I've added a more detailed error message, to be applied in case the.xlsx files are corrupted or the user chooses to open them... Maybe it was a little bit slow, but it made my life way easier! This script makes Excel think that you are sending data over your network to another PC. You can use it to send data to multiple users, but it's very useful if you send a long SQL query for example. My life has never been the same since this was released! 2.0 Now VB scripts is open to all, the new version will be released under the same terms as Allscripts OPENOFFICE
