What's new:

– Part 3 by Cathy Crosby This story is one of friendship that spans two centuries and has brought me a large circle of friends who are also like elders, laughing in knowledge and loving with wisdom beyond imagining. Chapter 1 Not all The Raven were of the business Karleen Kohlin awoke to a voice she had not heard since her eight years in the Cloistered convent. "So this is your plan?" "Yes, Ma'am." She had answered and rolled over in bed to see Erin Solstice standing at the foot of the bed wearing her nightgown and robe. "Maybe it would be better if I wrote something for you. You can't write anything down of value if you sleep in. But this might get you going, that's for sure," She said, lifting a piece of paper with a black crayon and a box of crayons. "Lady Erin? That…is quite extraordinary in itself." "I know, that's why I'm going to give you something else to write besides this. What I've written, I've written for public consumption to be sure. Now what I'm about to give you isn't a public thing, and it's not meant to be shown to anybody unless they are truly prepared to hear about such things, because such things are unheard of and unseen." "I am quite capable of that." "No, but I think so…that's not the point. I'm giving you this because I don't want anybody to misunderstand it, or misinterpret it. You may write a paper on it and I will give you all the necessary materials to do so." "If such things exist?" "They do, but they're not common knowledge, at least not here in the Free Cities. They don't often surface, especially outside of a few isolated sightings and such which are even rarer. I think you're the first person to really begin to understand what's going on. You may be the first person to write something on it and make it common knowledge." "What are you referring to?" "
