"If you want to turn a good profit," they say, "get a new ladder, a new mower, a new car." Surely, wood is cheap. But not in every case. The costs of some items and the looks of others can make a difference. If you make a mistake the consequences can be dire. This was an old rule in my mind, partly because I have a deep-rooted distrust of 'marketing'. But it is true – if you need to buy something from B&Q, they will often give you a better price than you can get from another outlet. But if they don't, it could be worth driving elsewhere. Similarly with garden centres. I remember an ex-architect friend who said he could purchase more materials from a brick and tile company than a garden centre. I am not an expert 0cc13bf012
