“We at Adobe are maniacally focused on making our products more intuitive and collaborative for artists and designers,” said Jenifer Tidwell, senior director of Photoshop and Creative Cloud at Adobe. “We’re excited to share the development of these new Photoshop features with MAX attendees, as these powerful new tools will bring the power of Photoshop to even more people and applications in a very simplified learning curve.” The launch of Share for Review (beta) is also previewed in the new Adobe Sensei “learn” option. The new option includes collaboration insight in the Editor Palette window. The Editor Palette automatically shows a detailed real-time view of the Photoshop editing session with Photoshop now able to understand when content has been inserted or removed and can interact more quickly and precisely. Add significantly more power to the Creative Cloud Design Suite with CSS-powered transforms. The ability now exists to dynamically render background elements on an image, for one-click web and mobile transforms. Selective filters can now be used to change the content of images for mobile, print, and more. Giant strides were made in Photoshop’s design tool. The new heal tool can now repair the selection, and when the selection is reselected, the new insert tab replaces the erase tab, so a user can preview their changes and make additional edits without having to redo the entire selection. The Clone Stamp tool now puts itself in the right place: on the tool panel, just like all of Adobe’s other tools, making it easier than ever to apply changes to large areas of an image.
